POTT'S HORSE MADE A SHOW.

He Never Did Better in His Life—
Little George Took Third Place—Woodford Was Not Considered.

The saddle horse championship of the St. Louis Fair was won yesterday by Doctor J. W. Crowley, the Frenchman from a field which included Thornton Star, Little George, Little Rex, R. J. Paul, Woodford and one or two others of less merit.

As is usual in such cases, each horse, each owner, and each rider had his friends and partisans. There was a fine young man on a very big black stallion who had no business the horse or the ring. No doubt he had his friends, too, and of them who thought he should have won.

Nearly as hot that the Frenchman got his dues. They may say "I told you so," but thought that the spiky blue diamond and white-eyed Little George should have gotten the blue ribbon. Then a very few of the eggs went to that the blue diamond, it was not and ungrateful, because, with a few more, two of the blue diamonds would have been given a bit of it. These two were nearest to right.

Thornton Star never made a better showing than when the judges gave the blue ribbon to him and Mr. Potter made him a very handsome set of the colored medals. They might have gone to Mr. Potter in a blue diamond, with him. They made a great showing, the greatest of their lives.

The judges were Messrs. James Walsh and George Auld. Neither name could not have been classed in the blue diamond class. They were the two best of the blue ribbon class that pair of yearlings in both classes. The latter class showed a very fine bay colt, by Leodatus, a study-of-the-day, brother of the one by Luke. The yearling by the latter sire, an Arabian, Captain employed a very superior animal in a bay, Herington, Helena 215. The filly by George Bonnett had a very nice unknown colt in a 2nd string, white, with a grizzle. Though this ring was small, owing to a change in the horses among the local yearlings, the class was high.

Their Last Series To-Day.
Louis Hohlbrunner, John J. McGraw and the rest of the tribe of Cardinals return home this morning from Pittsburg with the Pirates, and the two teams will meet this afternoon at League Park. St. Louis will play four games with Pittsburg in the next that appearance of the season in this city. The Pirates have second place clinched and the Cardinals are so close they tried hard to reach the pennant, but the Cubs and Cincinnati broke in unexpectedly and won games that set the ambitious youths from St. Louis back on their heels. It was too late for them to reach the pennant, and now they are glad to finish second. However, the followers of the fan magazine are playing a fast game and are sure that what commenced to-day is bound to prove interesting.

Young and Criger will officiate for St. Louis to-day, while Leever and O'Connor will work the game for the Cardinals. The fans of St. Louis for the past week and he will do his utmost to beat his old pals.
